

NO LONGER AVAILABLE

CALL: 781-9400
1-800-830-7275

Republic Mortgage, Inc.

ARTISTIC

ROOFING SALE!
SAVE 35% OFF
OUR ALREADY LOW PRICES

100% FINANCING AVAILABLE
OR 180 DAYS SAME AS CASH WAC

CALL TODAY FOR FREE IN HOME ESTIMATE

937-1495

ARTISTIC IRON IMPROVEMENTS FOR YOUR HOME
3301 W. ALAMEDA A BLOCK WEST OF FEDERAL

agreed to a conference committee's compromise.

It now goes to Gov. Roy Romo. The major disagreements over SB-193 were resolved after House sponsor David Owen, R-Greeley, and other House committee members accepted the Senate position on tax breaks to charitable organizations located in enterprise zones.

The Senate rejected a House

agreed to a conference committee's compromise. Under the agreement, donors can continue to receive the full credit until January 2001, if they maintain annual contributions to the group.

Donors making contributions to non-profits after July 1 can take only a 25% tax credit.

The bill was criticized by some House members as not going far enough to address problems with agreed to a conference committee's compromise. Under the agreement, donors can continue to receive the full credit until January 2001, if they maintain annual contributions to the group.

Donors making contributions to non-profits after July 1 can take only a 25% tax credit. The bill was criticized by some House members as not going far enough to address problems with agreed to a conference committee's compromise. Under the agreement, donors can continue to receive the full credit until January 2001, if they maintain annual contributions to the group.

Sunnyside Gold, state resolve lawsuit

Firm agrees to maintain and improve water in Upper Animas Basin

Associated Press

Sunnyside Gold Corp. and the Colorado Department of Public Health and Environment on Monday signed an agreement resolving a 2-year-old lawsuit over cleanup of the Sunnyside Mine near Silverton.

The agreement calls for Sunnyside to maintain and improve water quality in the Upper Animas River Basin. In return, the state has removed objections to Sunnyside's reclamation efforts.

This agreement shows that the department and responsible companies in the mining industry can find common ground to solve some of the difficult reclamation issues that arise around the state," said Patia Shwayder, the health department's acting director.

Sunnyside Gold, a wholly owned subsidiary of Denver-based Echo Bay Inc., sued the health department in 1994 for clarification on the state's enforcement of water quality rules regarding hazardous discharges from naturally occurring seeps and springs.

Sunnyside has invested $9.9 million in reclamation efforts at the Sunnyside and Mayflower mills and estimates it will spend another $5 million to $10 million on five other sites over the next two years.

The long-abandoned sites are leaching metals such as iron, manganese, zinc and aluminum into the Animas River and its tributaries.

In addition to taking cleanup measures at its own sites, Sunnyside also has agreed to remove waste piles and other mining debris from property it doesn't own.

Shwayder said Colorado is protected in the agreement by a $5 million surety bond.

The Sunnyside Mine operated from the 1960s through 1991, when it closed after the economically viable gold deposits ran out and the base metals market would no longer support operation costs.

subject to local codes. Not valid with any other offers. Based on level lot.

CALL: 781-9400
1-800-830-7275

Republic Garages, Inc.

ARTISTIC

ROOFING SALE!
SAVE 35% OFF

OUR ALREADY LOW PRICES

100% FINANCING AVAILABLE OR 180 DAYS SAME AS CASH WAC

CALL TODAY FOR FREE IN HOME ESTIMATE

937-1495

ARTISTIC IRON, IMPROVEMENTS FOR YOUR HOME
3301 W. ALAMEDA 4 BLOCKS WEST OF FEDERAL

agreed to a conference committee's compromise.

It now goes to Gov. Roy Romer. The major disagreements over SB 193 were resolved after House sponsor David Owen, R-Greeley, and other House committee members accepted the Senate position on tax breaks to charitable organizations located in enterprise zones.

The Senate rejected a House

groups if those donations begin before July 1, 1996.

Under the agreement, donors can continue to receive the full credit until January 2001, if they maintain annual contributions to the group.

Donors making contributions to non-profits after July 1 can take only a 25% tax credit.

The bill was criticized by some House members as not going far enough to address problems with date old ones after January 1997.

It also requires that the state Department of Local Affairs submit termination plans to the Economic Development Commission, and requires more frequent and thorough reporting on the zones to Department of Local Affairs officials.

It also includes a 3% tax credit for job training and school-to-work programs.

Sunnyside Gold, state resolve lawsuit

Firm agrees to maintain and improve water in Upper Animas Basin

Associated Press

Sunnyside Gold Corp. and the Colorado Department of Public Health and Environment on Monday signed an agreement resolving a 2-year-old lawsuit over cleanup of the Sunnyside Mine near Silverton.

The agreement calls for Sunnyside to maintain and improve water quality in the Upper Animas River Basin. In return, the state has removed objections to Sunnyside's reclamation efforts.

"This agreement shows that the department and responsible companies in the mining industry can find common ground to solve some of the difficult reclamation issues that arise around the state," said Patti Shwayder, the health department's acting director.

Sunnyside Gold, a wholly owned subsidiary of Denver-based Echo Bay Inc., sued the health department in 1994 for clarification on the state's enforcement of water-quality rules regarding hazardous discharges from naturally occurring seeps and springs.

Sunnyside has invested $9.9 million in reclamation efforts at the Sunnyside and Mayflower mills and estimates it will spend another $5 million to $10 million on five other sites over the next two years.

The long-abandoned sites are leaching metals such as iron, manganese, zinc and aluminum into the Animas River and its tributaries.

In addition to taking cleanup measures at its own sites, Sunnyside also has agreed to remove waste piles and other mining debris from property it doesn't own.

Shwayder said Colorado is protected in the agreement by a $5 million surety bond.

The Sunnyside Mine operated from the 1880s through 1991, when it closed after the economically viable gold deposits ran out and the base metals market would no longer support operation costs.